Melbourne is a very large city situated on the south-eastern coast of Australia. It is made up of a Central Business District (C.B.D.) and many surrounding suburbs. Melbourne covers an area of more than 6,000 square kilometers, which is about the size of London.

In one hundred and fifty years, Melbourne has grown from a small campsite into a city of three and a half million people. Most families live in the suburbs in a detached house with its own garden. This means that people have to travel long distances to school and work or to go shopping. Almost everyone has a car and although most streets are wide, there is a traffic problem.
