

Dialogue A

A: We need to weigh it first and then I'll tell you the exact price.

B: OK There are only books in there, but they may be heavy.

A: We'll see. Now fill in this form, please. Your name goes here, and the addressee's information goes there, on those lines.

B: Yeah, I've got it. How long will it take the parcel to get there?

A: Two or three days. We can do it faster but it will be more expensive.

B: No, no need. Two or three days is OK for me.

Dialogue B

A: Excuse me, can I see that book please?

B: This one?

A: No, the one to the right. Next to the thick green encyclopedia.

B: Ok. Here you are. This is also a kind of encyclopedia but it's for children and it focuses on animals - living and endangered.

A: Right. It looks exactly what I need for my nephew. I'm looking for a birthday present for him... and... I think this will perfectly suit his interests.

B: If you've got our customer loyalty card, the price will be 15% lower than you see on the book.

Dialogue C

A: Are you enjoying yourself?

B: Oh, yes! It was very nice of Tim to invite me and I'm glad to meet friends here.

A: And we are glad to meet his new friends. Tim and me... we've known each other for ten years already.

B: Have you? What was he like when he was a small child?

A: Well... he liked books and animals and football. In primary school, his favourite book was Winnie-the-Pooh. Like the bear, Tim has always liked honey.

B: Oh. I know. I bet the cake today is some sort of honey cake too!

A: We'll see it soon!

Dialogue D

A: Oh. no! I've forgotten my book at home.

B: The Science textbook?

A: Yeah.

B: It's not a problem. We can share mine.

A: But it is a problem. Mrs Grey never allows us to change seats. She's got a sort of a system for how students should be placed to get the best result.

B: I doubt that. Anyway, we can ask for her permission to sit together. I'm sure she won't mind.

Now we are ready to start.

I don't like wasting my time when I'm on holiday. I believe holidays are just the right time to learn something new. This summer my friend and I are planning to take a cooking course. Now I'm only able to cook basic dishes but I would like to learn to cook something really delicious and even exotic.

Speaker B

If you want to eat a really delicious yogurt, you should go to the village where we usually spend summers. Help yourself - it's fresh, we bought it last weekend when we were there. It was cold and it rained now and then but we enjoyed our stay anyway. We visited a few craft shops and bought some souvenirs. Then we took a walk along the ancient streets and had a meal in a small restaurant.

Speaker C

Nowadays, anyone can be good at cooking! All you need to do is to browse for a recipe and the internet will give you tons of them. All that gave me an idea to make mum an edible present - a cake for example. She cooks very well and she will be happy that I've got this skill from her. Now I'll check I've got the ingredients needed for the cake and ... I'm ready for a challenge!

Speaker D

I work as an assistant chef for a small restaurant. My working hours start at 9am. To be in the restaurant on time, I had to get up at seven. I usually go to work by bike and cycling takes me about half an hour. Then, I have breakfast at work, it really saves time. Then I follow the instructions my boss gives me... until my lunch break. And after lunch I get back to my cooking job ...

Speaker E

I like cakes, chocolate, and milkshakes. My younger brother also prefers a chocolate bar to a green salad or vegetable soup. However, two days ago my brother got an awful toothache and the dentist told us it was because he had eaten too much sugar. Now we've made a list of foods we are not going to eat any more. Because they contain too much sugar. It includes all sorts of sweets, biscuits and even ice cream.

Now we are ready to start

Phillip: Hi, Andrea! It's really nice outdoors. Fancy a walk to the park or somewhere else?

Andrea: Sorry'. Phillip. I've got some things to do.

Phillip: Which means no, right? Ok. What are you so busy with? Your homework?

Andrea: No, it's not that. I'm busy with some writing.

Phillip: A diary? All the girls in my class are writing diaries now. Funny, they prefer old-fashioned notebooks to normal blogs.

Andrea: It's because a diary is a private matter and you can't trust your thoughts to the internet. Anyway, I'm not writing any diary. It's a story.

Phillip: A story? What's it about? And why are you writing it?

Andrea: You know. I've got an idea to take part in the competition for young writers. It's called 'My first book'. The prize is a two-week online writing course, which is delivered by world-famous authors.

Phillip: Sounds impressive. I can't write but I like reading. Historical novels especially.

Andrea: Me too. It's my favourite genre. History and literature in one book.

Phillip: Really? I thought all girls read only love stories.

Andrea: And I thought all boys watched only action films and detective films.

Phillip: You've always been top of the class at Literature. And your school essays have always been the best. But I never knew that you took writing so seriously.

Andrea: I don't ...but... by the way... we are staging a play at our school theatre. Would you like to come and see the performance?

Phillip: If nothing urgent turns up. Yes, I would. Are you playing the part of a beautiful princess there?

Andrea: There won't be any princesses! No kings, no dragons, pirates or witches. It's going to be a serious play. And you won't see me on the stage anyway. I'll be reading the narration - you will only hear my voice.

Phillip: I am already intrigued. Did you write the play too?

Andrea: No, it wasn't me. We took a well-known classical play and changed it. In brief... it's like. One day all the characters from the 19th century wake up in our world... and their adventures start. One of the characters is a famous scientist, another one is a... No, I won't say anything else. Otherwise, it won't be interesting to watch the play.

Phillip: Ok-ok. I'm coming, for sure. You'll be a famous writer one day.

Andrea: Oh, no! I don't want to be a professional writer. I want to teach Literature and languages to children. And to adults too.

Phillip: Are you saying you find teaching more exciting than writing?

Andrea: Yeah. Teaching means communication with people. I love it. And writing is only a hobby to me.

Phillip: Right. And I bet you can make a very good language teacher. You speak French and German really well.

Andrea: I don't speak German, Phillip. I speak French and Spanish. As for German, it's on my list. I'm going to take a German course this spring.

Phillip: Sorry. You speak so many languages, no wonder I get them confused.

Andrea: Aha.

Phillip: Anyway I understand you are going to write your story the whole day today. I'm leaving for the park. We are having a skateboard competition and I can't miss it. And then we are going to the cinema. A new film with Keanu Reeves is on.

Andrea: Wait a minute. What time does the film start?

Phillip: At 7 pm

Andrea: OK. I think I can join you for the film. I'll be in the cinema at ten to seven.

Phillip: Right. See you there then...
