Anton's Apartment Renovation

When my wife and I bought our first apartment, we were excited but also worried. The apartment was in a good location and the price was reasonable, but it needed major renovation. The previous owners had lived there for forty years and had never updated anything. The wallpaper was old and yellow, the bathroom fixtures were from Soviet times, and the kitchen was tiny and dark.

We decided to do the renovation ourselves to save money. We saved a lot of money, but we also made many mistakes and the process took much longer than we expected. We spent weeks looking at design magazines and websites, choosing colours, materials, and furniture. My wife wanted a modern minimalist style with white walls and wooden floors. I agreed because I trust her taste in interior design.

We started the renovation in May, hoping to finish by August before our wedding. We removed all the old wallpaper, which was much harder than we had thought. Some walls had five layers of different wallpaper! We also had to remove the old floor, which created an incredible amount of dust. Everything in the apartment was covered with a thick grey layer. Then we hired professionals for the electrical work and plumbing because these things are too dangerous to do without proper training. The electrician found several serious problems with the old wiring that could have caused a fire. We had to spend extra money to replace all the electrical cables. The bathroom renovation wasn't easy either. We wanted to install a new bathtub, sink, and toilet, and put beautiful tiles on the walls and floor. We bought all the materials and started working. But we didn't measure everything correctly, and we bought tiles that were the wrong size. We had to return them and order new ones, which delayed everything by two weeks.

By September, we were exhausted and frustrated. The apartment looked worse than before – there were holes in the walls, no floor in some rooms, and construction materials everywhere. Finally, in November – three months later than planned – we finished. The result was beautiful and worth all the effort. Our friends couldn't believe it was the same place.

A. Anton and his wife were excited because their new apartment ...

- 1) was conveniently located.
- 2) didn't require any renovation.
- 3) was rather expensive.
- 4) had beautiful decorations from Soviet time.

B. The hardest part of the renovation was ...

- 1) taking down the wallpaper.
- 2) doing electrical work.
- 3) removing the floor.
- 4) choosing colours, materials, and furniture.

C. Anton and his wife hired professionals to ...

- 1) do all the renovation work.
- 2) measure everything correctly.
- 3) do the electrical work and the plumbing.
- 4) remove the old floor.

D. The bathroom renovation was delayed because ...

- 1) the workers didn't come.
- 2) they ordered wrong-sized tiles.
- 3) the bathtub broke.
- 4) it wasn't easy to replace the cables.

E. The renovation took ...

- 1) exactly three months.
- 2) less time than they had expected.
- 3) about one year.
- 4) much longer than they had planned.
